Southwest Guilford High School

FIRST CLASS . . .

First Class. It can mean so many things. At Southwest Guilford the 1982-83 school year was special because the first class to have attended the school for four full years graduated. They had been there from the beginning and had put in many long, hard hours to build our school into something that everyone could take pride in.

It wasn't always easy to stand in the shadows of more established, stronger schools and not be discouraged; but all of the students kept on working. They never gave up and in this way displayed another meaning of the word class. "Class" is striving for the best. It means believing that one can do anything and go anywhere with determination. It means having high hopes and dreams, setting goals and meeting them, having confidence in one's self, and being able to say, "I did my best." With Class, a person can be accepted anywhere. It shines out above anything else and lets others know that a person is hard-working and trustworthy.

High school is a plateau in life and a spring board for the future. The students at Southwest have learned that with hard work and determination many dreams can be realized. It is hoped that they will continue to show that the Cowboys are first class in every way.

Homecoming and Green and White Day provide lots of fun for everyone including Darrell Farlow, Amy Rich, and Rich Toomey.

Laura Driver and Troy Fite cheer for the Cowboy football team during their battle against Randleman on October 1, 1982.

The smoking area holds separate interests for Joanne Zarrello and John Wright.

Jeff Nipp is more interested in entertaining for the camera than he is in learning Spanish.

Andy Greene and Keith Halipillas are busy putting "SW" on towels in the hallway by the gym.

Lisa Pendergrass and Brenda Lee share a quiet conversation in one of their classes.

Ways Than One*

Anthony Gill is caught in a moment of deep concentration.

Schedule conflicts took a toll on everyone during the first days of school. Seniors Edwin Ridge, Jeff Morgan, and Don Opgenorth are shown attempting to get their schedules worked out.

A spirited group of sophomores shows its support for the Cowboys during the pep rally before the Ragsdale game.

Michael McGinn watches as Beth Holliday opens a present on her eighteenth birthday before going to see the Rocky Horror Picture Show.

Doug Lowe, Mike Whittington, Billy Padgett, and Scott Jordan show their expertise in climbing walls as they practice for the upcoming Spiderman competition.

Dressed in their best these Southwest students are ready for a night on the town.

These proud freshmen show off their jail cell during Homecoming week.

Participating in the activities of Homecoming Week, these seniors prove their class spirit by "punking out" in an effort to win the week long spirit competition.

The routine of the school day was broken by the events and excitement of Homecoming Week. The Student Council encouraged all students to prove their class the best by earning points awarded for participating in a variety of activities and by bailing their classmates out of jail. The sale of lollipops and bandanas began on Monday and continued throughout the week, during which the dress code was suspended as students consecutively dressed down, wore T-shirts, punked out, hatted their heads, and, on Friday, showed their true Cowboy Colors. Enthusiasm was heightened at the pep rally on Friday when the sophomores and seniors battled for the "Most Spirit" award. The sophomores yelled and cheered their way to possession of the Spirit Banner, but the seniors triumphed by winning the overall competition.

SHE'S THE ONE

Tradition was once again initiated as Homecoming was held in our stadium for the first time in the four-year history of the school. Streamers, tied to the field goals, buffeted triumphantly in the chilly October winds, beckoning the arrival of the Varsity Football team and the Homecoming Court.

As time expired in the second quarter, the Cowboys had surged to a 6-6 tie. At the half, the band and flag corps performed for the highly-spirited crowd which bustled with excitement as they awaited the coming events. But the night belonged to others as the Homecoming Court assembled before the stage on which the Queen was to be crowned.

A great hush fell over the crowd as it was announced that Jan Lomax was the new Maid of Honor. After a week of anticipation leading up to this very special moment, the jubilant crowd's insatiable curiosity was satisfied as last year's Homecoming Queen, Karen Berry, crowned Laurie Tippet Homecoming Queen for 1982-83.

This year, students found that the Homecoming Dance that usually followed the game was not to be. Instead, they congregated at the school after the game and eagerly awaited the victory celebrations that were to ensue as a result of the Varsity Football Team's 21-6 victory over the Spartans of Central Davidson. As the last car left the parking lot and the lights ceased to illuminate the field, the night finally drew to a close. It was one to remember forever — the thrill, the spectacle, and the ecstasy of a very special night.

With a mist of heavenly moonlight and Charlie Brown... here by my side
 We started out at 7:00.....that night
 Each shooting star our guide.
 Our favorite tune was "We've Got Tonight"
 And when the prom was done
 We climbed upon a starlit cloud
 And went to Snoopy's.....for more fun.
 At 2.....o'clock we started home.
 Each moonbeam shining bright
 Forever more I shall recall
 The First Class.....time I had tonight.

Prom Queen Patti Callahan seems to be entranced by the events of the evening.

Taking a few minutes to relax, Holly Howell and her date share a private moment.

Exhibiting one of his many talents, Keith Hall performs a striptease act for his routine in the talent competition.

Three dramatic offerings highlighted the spring of '82 at Southwest.

First Class Act-er Troy Fite, as Elwood P. Dowd, starred alongside the mystical Pooka Harvey to delight the audience with the comedy which was directed by Mrs. Emily Simmons.

Fite also dominated the stage when, as Ima DeLyte, he was crowned Superstud '82 in the Junior class fun(d)-raising production of The 3rd Annual Womanless Beauty Pageant, which depended on the efforts of many of our First Class Act-ers, including Sidekick Title Winner Clair Voyance (Keith Wood) for its success.

"We've Got Tonight" was the theme of the elegant evening of the prom held at Bryan Park on May 15. Couples danced to the music of "Stash", enjoyed a delicious array of hors d'oeuvres, and it became quickly apparent that we did have tonight and that was all that really mattered.

Productions of the Past

Contestants watch as former Super Stud, Brad Shreve, crowns Troy Fite winner of the 1981-82 Womanless Beauty Pageant.

Kenny Gordon leads the senior class to victory as they refuse to let the dreary weather dampen their spirits.

The seniors seem to have things well under control in the upper parking lot.

Students gather to socialize and plan their course of action for the rest of this very gloomy day.

HOW DO YOU SPELL RELIEF...

... On a Dark, Dreary, Dismal Day?

The morbid weather keeps the Deep River Fire Department company as they await a deterioration of the situation.

Seniors James Petree and Kenny Royal seem exhausted from the activities of this misty day as they take a moment to relax on a friend's car.

As students arrived at school on Sept. 10, 1982, few realized that a gas leak would allow them to exercise almost unlimited liberties throughout the rest of the day which was characterized by misty rain and gloom. Though the foul weather refused to part, students didn't allow it to dampen their spirits. Unsafe conditions in the building forbade students to enter and they were forced to the parking lot where frolic was soon to ensue.

Gatherings of students listening to music from radios in cars added to the festive ambiance of the day. Underclassmen who rode buses found themselves captives there, unable to escape and truly enjoy the day as did their counterparts who drove. Soon frisbees emerged from cars and took to the air, characterizing the freedom and liberties the students were to enjoy.

Piling into cars, many students made hasty runs to the store for food and drink to satisfy their festive appetites.

Some found themselves spreading the spirit of the day to Ragsdale and the Pizza Hut in Jamestown where some merrymaking was to get a little out of hand. As the day progressed, more and more gatherings developed as students made the utmost of this overcast day.

For the football players, it was another story. Rumor had it that players had to remain at school to maintain their eligibility for the night's contest with Jordan Matthews. Although the game was almost cancelled, the Varsity Football Team played their best game in a 35-0 handling of the Jets.

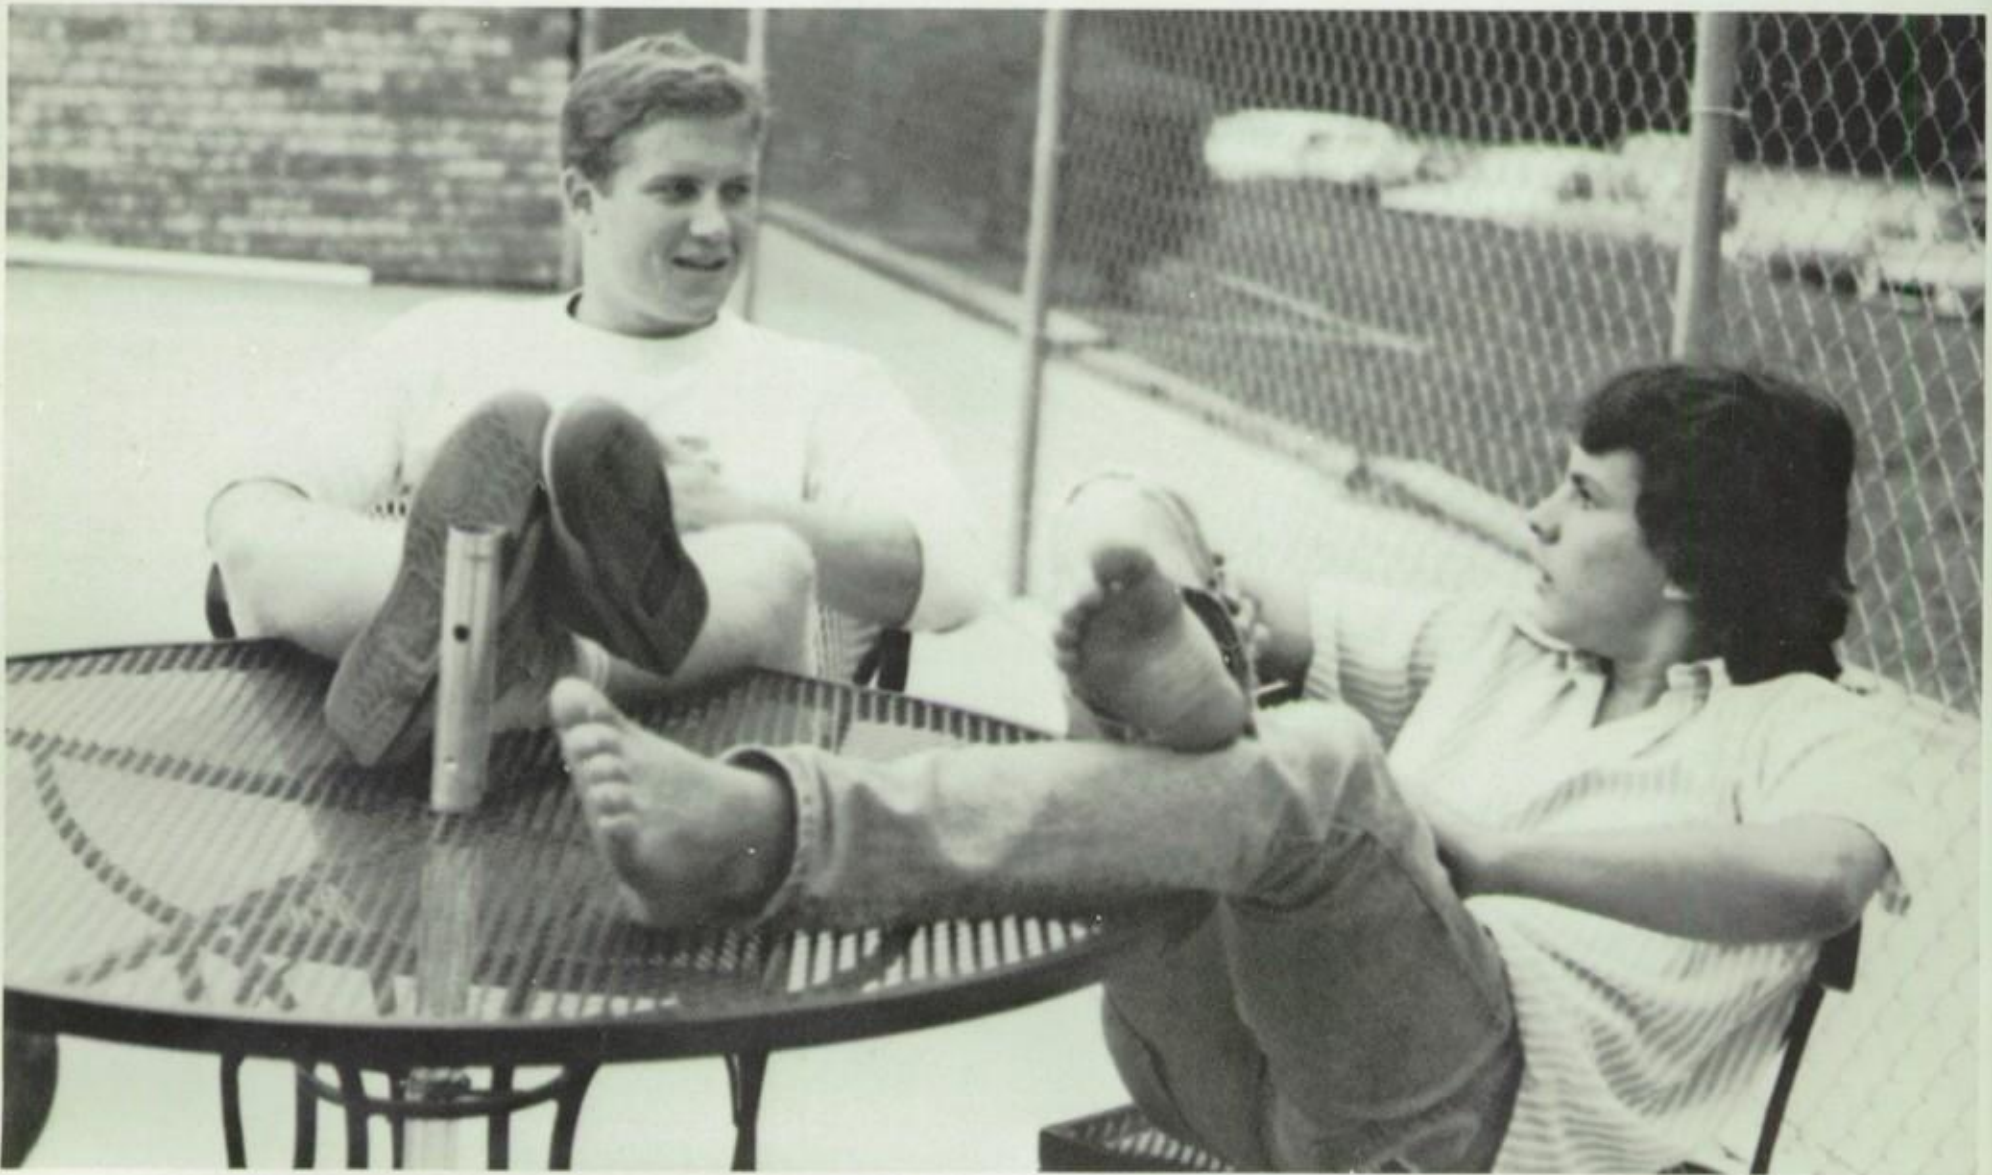

Students who ride the buses find themselves held captive, unable to escape and truly enjoy the festive spirit of the day.

Pam Pulliam occupies her leisure time "laying out" in the sun at Cedarwood Pool.

TWO SIDES OF SUMMER

Andy Kinard and Kenny Gordon prove they know what summer is really all about.

Tommy Conklin, a member of Cedarwood's swim team, prepares to dive into the water at a summer swim meet.

Pete Mason, David Corum, and Keith Halipillas begin working hard in the early days of practice.

This past summer meant fun and relaxation for all Southwest students. Shorts, bare feet, and sun tan lotion were familiar sights. School members worked diligently to recuperate from the previous school year and prepare for the next one. However, that was only one side of the summer. Aside from goofing off, many Cowboy devotees continued their dedication to Southwest throughout the summer.

The football team went through strenuous conditioning for most of the summer months. Their official practice began in early August.

The Southwest Flag Corps gave up part of their summer to prepare for the fall contests they would appear in with the band. Nine members of the flag corps attended a four-day flag camp at Elon College in July.

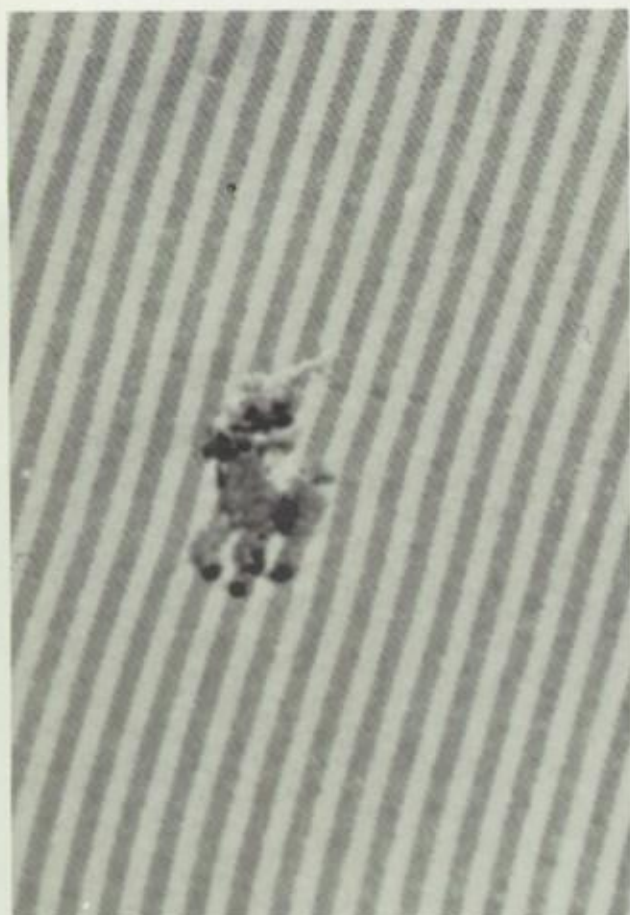

Away from Southwest-associated activities, many students joined their neighborhood swim teams. This proved to be a great way to keep in good shape and beat the heat over the hot summer.

Sheree Morton, Debbie Royster, Anne Bigelow, and Sandy Russell go through daily routine at flag camp.

WE'VE GOT STYLE

Each year as the new school year begins, students find themselves converting their wardrobes in an attempt to keep up with the new fashions and trends. Among the more popular labels and symbols found around the school were Levi's, Members Only, Polo and Aigner.

Another popular trend arose as hair styles began to go shorter. Girls, as well as guys, wore their hair well above the ear. One style exclusive to Southwest fashion was the popularity of high school class rings. Many juniors and seniors had the choice of purchasing a traditional ring from the school or creating his own look from area jewelry stores.

Although these fashions seemed to look quite well in this day and time, years from now these clothes will be described as old-fashioned, funny-looking, and definitely out-of-date.

THE FUN BEGINS . . .

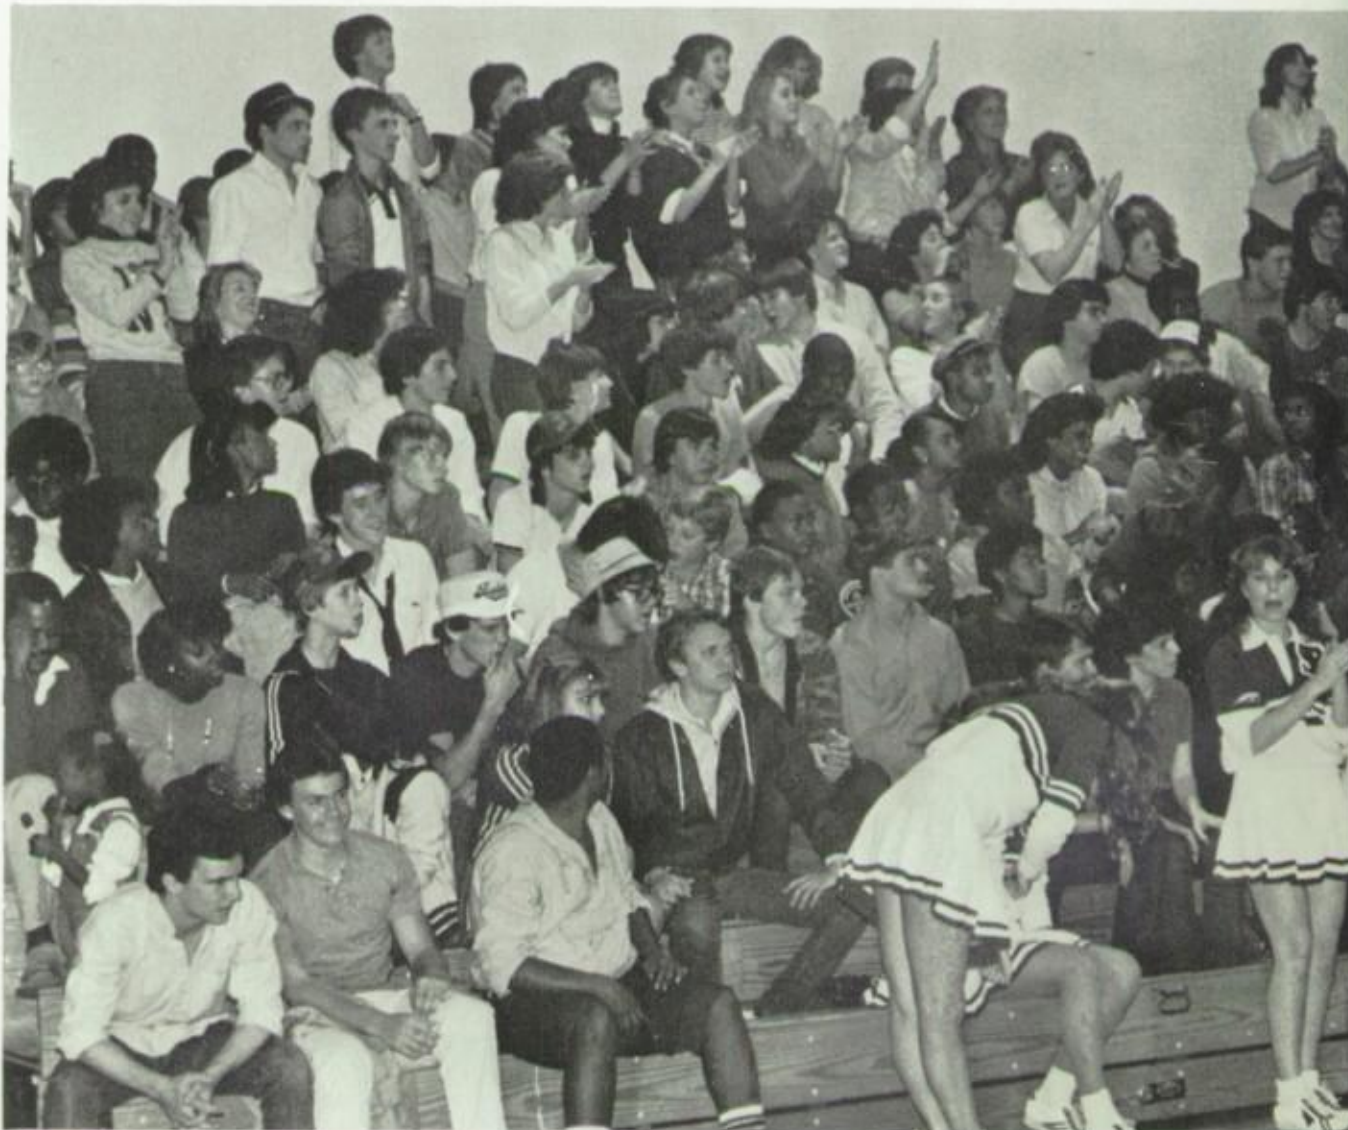

Todd Duke and Christen Hayworth enjoy a night out at Darryl's.

Won Tae Kim, Craig Pryzgoda, Warren Stroud, of their late pizza.

Even though keeping up with school was important, Southwest students knew that keeping up with the night-life also had its valuable place. After all of the many long and tedious days of the school week, students could be seen out just having fun to compensate for all the work they had done at school the previous week. Often there was a little over-compensation in order to get a good start on the next school week.

Country superstar, Willie Nelson, shows his Cowboy spirit as he wears a Southwest hat at a concert.

"that special someone" certainly ranked near the top of the popularity list. Along with that were activities such as taking on a video game at Putt-Putt, cheering for Southwest's athletic teams during nighttime games, or going to a weekend concert. When there was nothing else to do, the alternative of going out with some friends for a pizza or just gallivanting around Four Seasons Mall was always available to turn to.

Laura Driver, as Marie Marsh, prepares to shoot as Michael McGinn (who played Sid Parker at the drama contest) looks on, while Lisa Burgio, as Christine, lies dead on the floor.

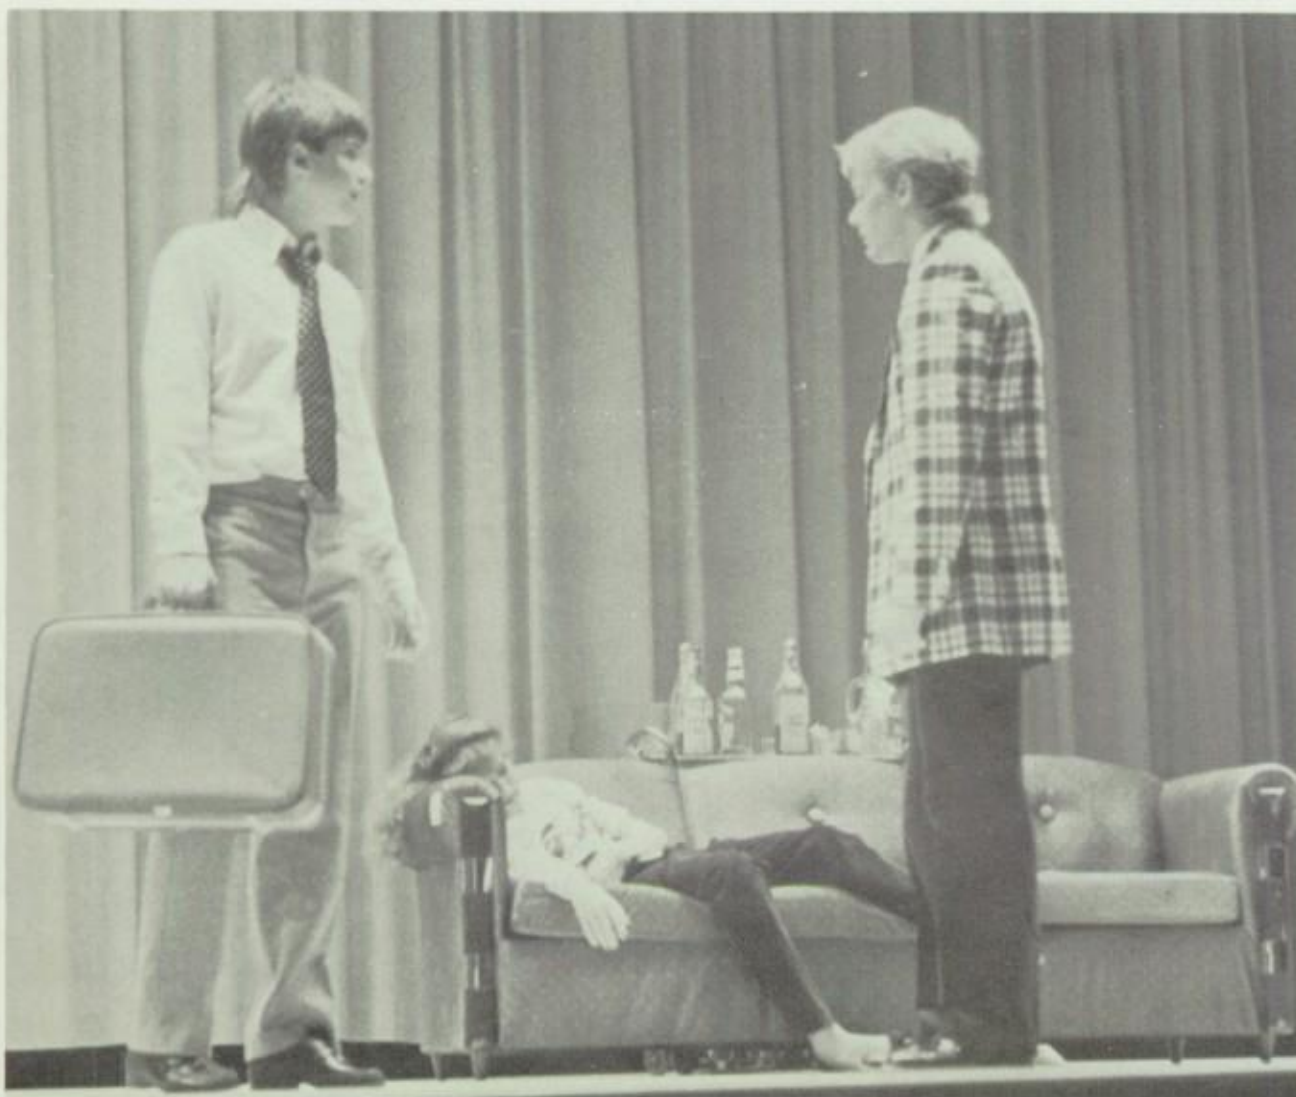

ABRA CADAVER

During a costume party, guests gather around Jack Marsh as he kneels over the apparently lifeless body of his wife, Marie.

Sid Parker, Charlie Vine, and Jack Marsh make casual conversation at the costume party.

Sid Parker helps Jack Marsh plan for his escape to a new identity after the deaths of Marie and Christine, for which they were both responsible.

A bewilderment of murder, mystery, and comedy characterized the advanced drama class's fall production of the play, Abra Cadaver. Who was plotting against whom? Who killed whom? Were they really dead? Those were some of the big questions the audiences were asking themselves as they watched the drama.

The play was performed for the first time during a visit by the troupe to a drama competition at the Weaver Educational Center in Greensboro in November. The contest proved to be a valuable learning experience for the whole cast. A performance was later given in front of the Southwest student body.

Members of the play's cast were: Troy Fite, Lisa Burgio, Laura Driver, David Wood, Michael McGinn, Melissa Morgan, Marvin Belton, Julie Brockman, Ginny Davis, Evelyn Greene, Kim Barlow, Venetia Copeland, Ken Royal, Ruth Wall, and Tamar Turman. Sandy Russell served as the stage manager and Bruce Adamo was the lighting manager.

One of the disadvantages of attending a small school was the lack of money and funds faced by many clubs and organizations. The small number of students involved in these clubs found it difficult to acquire the money needed to participate in many of the club's activities. Therefore, many clubs began organizing fund-raisers that would help them raise the money that they needed. The magazine sale was a school wide fund-raiser in which many students participated. Magazines were sold in order for the PTO to supply equipment and materials for the Academic programs. The candy sale provided money for the school to purchase a van for small groups to use on field trips. Without the effort of the students, the school and many clubs would not have had these needed funds.

The Donkey Basketball Game provides both entertainment and funds for the school.

Posters displaying fund-raising events were a common sight to students.

Being one of the more popular colleges, Carolina received many applications and transcripts from our seniors.

The reality of graduation draws near as Jeff Ellis chooses his announcements.

A problem faced by many students was the increasing cost of going to school. It seemed that there was always something else that had to be paid for. All these little things began to add up to a lot more than anyone could imagine.

DEDICATION USHERS IN

A NEW ERA . . . of Memories of Tradition of Cowboys

Three years of playing our home games at Ragsdale drew to an end in the Fall of '82 with the dedication of our anxiously awaited stadium. Completion of the stadium had become a reality due to the many volunteers who contributed uncountable hours working to finish this massive project. As the goal posts were erected and the lighting problems solved, the stadium possessed an air of authenticity and meaning for both the present and the yet unwritten future.

The night began with the Varsity football players performing some of their many special talents for the crowd composed mainly of parents and friends of the players. Following their display of skills came the introduction of the 1982 Cowboy Football Teams to the spectators. Jack McCachern then took over the spotlight as the field dedication ceremony ensued under the starry skies which encompassed this dark night.

As the long awaited day of the field dedication arrived and passed into history, the Cowboys had played their last home game at Ragsdale. Their rich football tradition had found a new home in the woodland setting of the school. The Cowboys had indeed found their rightful home and were here to stay, carrying on the tradition and style of play that firmly established their presence in the Central Carolina Conference. The day left many priceless memories behind as a new feeling of pride arrived and fearlessly beckoned the future with a determination and a will to conquer.

Laura Stanley seems to be enjoying herself at the field dedication.

Final completion of the press box and the bleachers added an air of authenticity to the newly dedicated stadium.

Perhaps contemplating the Cowboys' rich tradition in football, Dean Dull gazes out onto the newly dedicated field.

These Varsity Football Team members stand on the threshold of history as they are introduced to the spectators.

Isn't She Lovely

Beauty, personality, and popularity were traits that no member of the 1983 Basketball Court was lacking. Elected by their own classmates, these girls were presented to an approving audience of basketball fans during the half-time ceremonies of the final varsity game.

The Cowboy Basketball Court was made up of two representatives from each of the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes. Three attendants were chosen from the senior class.

The tension mounted as the nine nervous attendants, accompanied by their chosen escorts, waited for the crowning of the new Cowboy Basketball Queen. As her name was announced as the winner, captains from the varsity basketball teams presented the queen's bouquet to Senior Renee Mull.

Once again, a new year of trends had influenced our lives. Fond remembrances were triggered by such phrases as the heart touching, "E.T. phone home," and the New Wave theme of "Rock the Casbah." Students soon became well-acquainted with these changing fads and became an integral part of their popularity.

Despite the climbing prices of theater tickets, which crested at $4.00, many students found that their desire to "go to the movies" was more than satisfied this year. The box office favorites were the heart warming, E.T. and the oscar-winning On Golden Pond. Summer's arrival brought Rocky III, which had a strong showing, as well as An Officer and a Gentleman, Poltergeist, and Star Trek II: the Wrath of Khan.

On the music scene, New Wave music increasingly gained popularity as groups like Adam Ant, the Go Go's, the Clash, and the Stray Cats imported their "punk rock" music into our society. Their increased popularity can be largely attributed to the phenomenal success of cable tv's Music Television. The top albums of the year belonged to Men at Work, Asia, John Cougar, Van Halen, and Darryl Hall &

John Oates. Among those performing at the Greensboro Coliseum were Aerosmith, Billy Joel, Pat Benatar, Billy Squire, Judas Priest, John Cougar, and Heart.

We witnessed the arrival of an army of blue men better known as Smurfs who gained almost instantaneous popularity. Funky Winkerbean again provided us with another year of school-related frustrations. Other cartoon favorites were Blondie, The Wizard of Id, Gil Thorpe, Garfield, and the ever-lovable Ziggy.

Students enjoyed dining at places such as Godfather's, Darryl's, Elizabeth's, and the ever popular McDonald's. When students wanted to "eat out," they were sure to find a restaurant to satisfy their own special tastes.

As the video game craze infested our school, many students found themselves exchanging their money for gameroom tokens. Then they "fed" their tokens to such insatiable creatures as Pac Man, Centipede, Donkey Kong, Galaga, Pengo, and Space Duel. Students found themselves spending most of their money and time at such establishments as Putt Putt, Electronic America, Galaxy I, and Champs.

their fellow classmates and teachers, these students proved to be exceptional in their accomplishments. Proudly representing the First Class Act, these students were the outstanding seniors of 1983.

Looking Back With the Class of '83

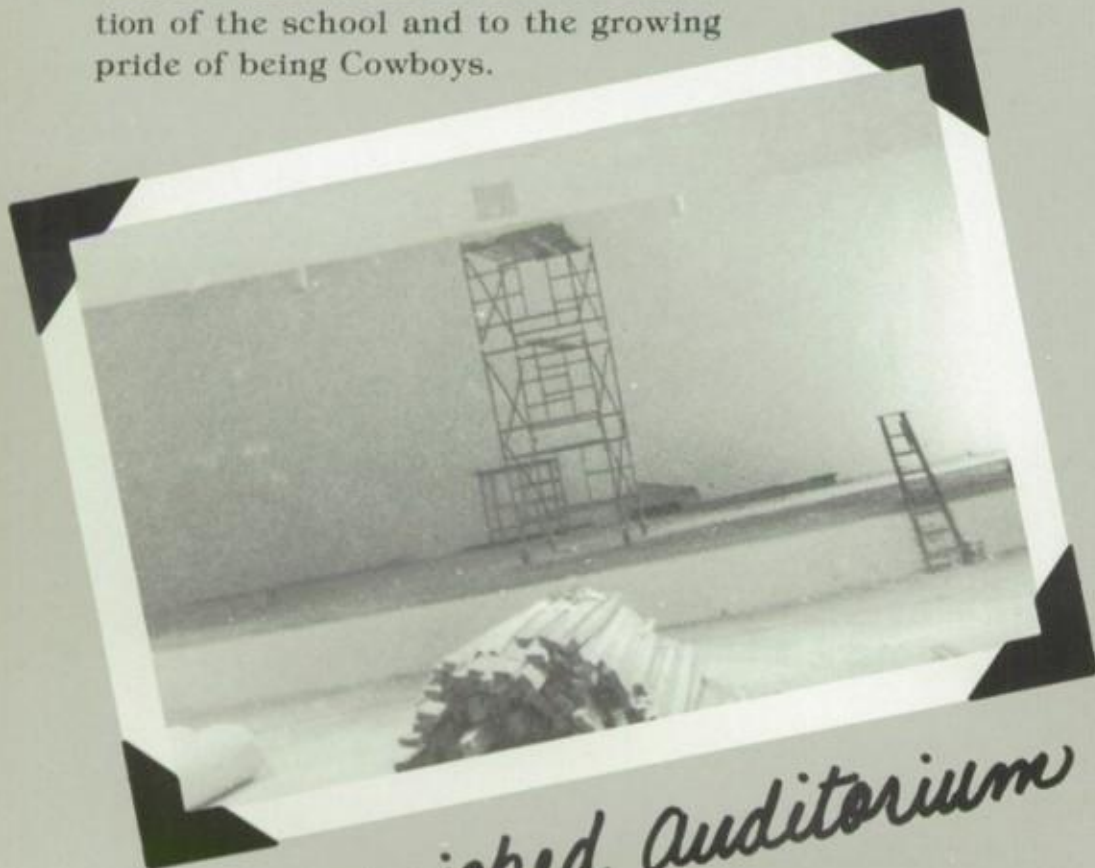

As Southwest completed its fourth year of operation, it was time for the original freshman class to graduate and move on to other places and activities, but, as this time approached, they found themselves looking back and remembering their early days at the school.

They remembered having no lockers, no gym, and no auditorium. They remembered seeing old faces but many more new ones and making new friends. They remembered trying to build new loyalties to the Cowboys and break their old ties to Ragsdale and Northwest.

It wasn't easy to have to start from scratch and try to create spirit and establish traditions, but they felt good knowing from the beginning that they were a special class, the class that would contribute much to the foundation of the school and to the growing pride of being Cowboys.

ACADEMICS

Due to the cutbacks in federal spending, many schools were forced to close their doors for the 1982-83 school year.

“IT DON’T COME EASY”

Taking tests this year was no different from the past. They appeared to be harder and longer, especially for upperclassmen. Making good grades meant attentiveness in class, hours of study, and page after page of notes. Even then, no one was guaranteed an “A”.

For seniors, conquering senior English was a major feat, while freshmen felt 9th grade English was simply impossible. World History classes found baseball review games gave them an edge for difficult tests. U.S. History was not the easiest part of most freshmen schedules; however, being a required course, it was inevitable. Despite unavoidable difficulties, Cowboys successfully survived another school year.

Chemicals & Calculations

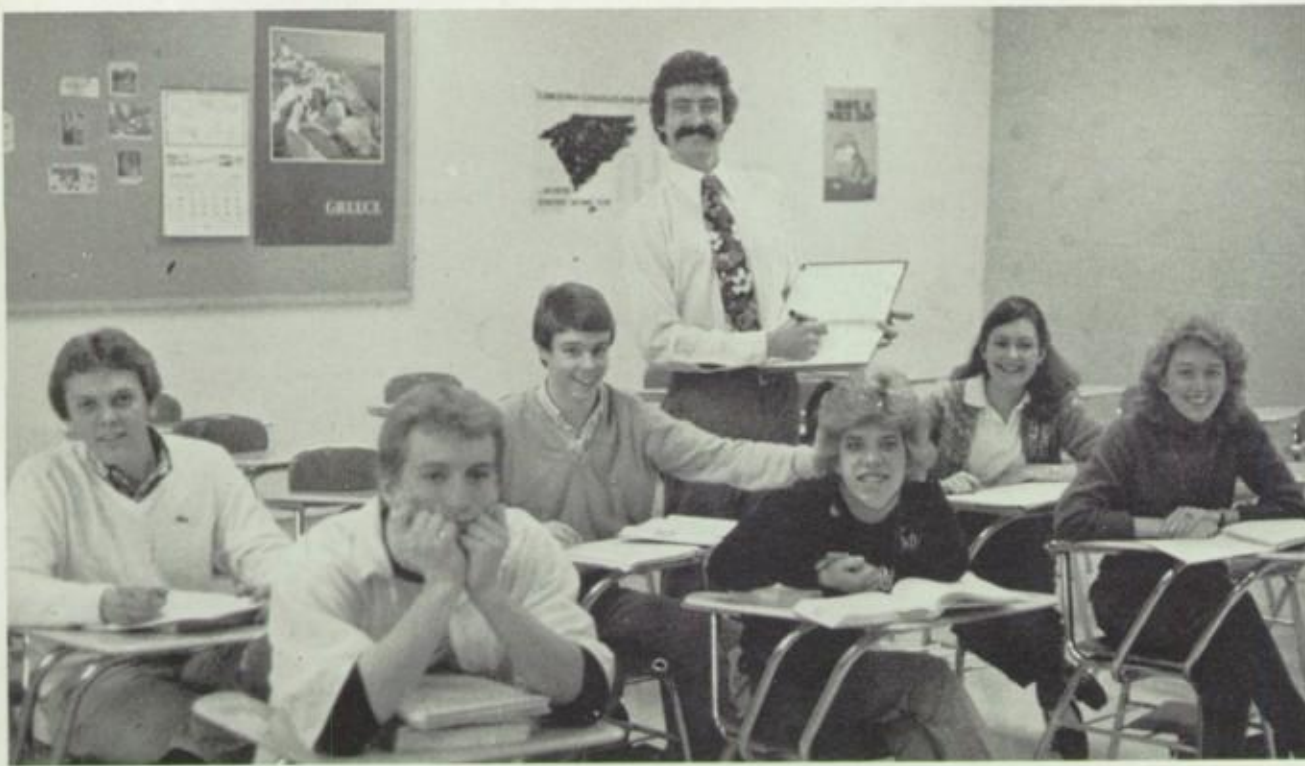

Students that took math and science came in contact with many chemicals and did lots of calculations. Although only two years of math and science were required, many students chose to further their knowledge in each area by taking some advanced courses.

The math department grew this year with the addition of a calculus class taught by Mr. Russell Slagle. With only six students, the class was able to accomplish more. The addition of computer terminals was also an asset. It enabled more students to get the necessary help in their weaker areas. Business math was offered to those students planning to pursue a business career.

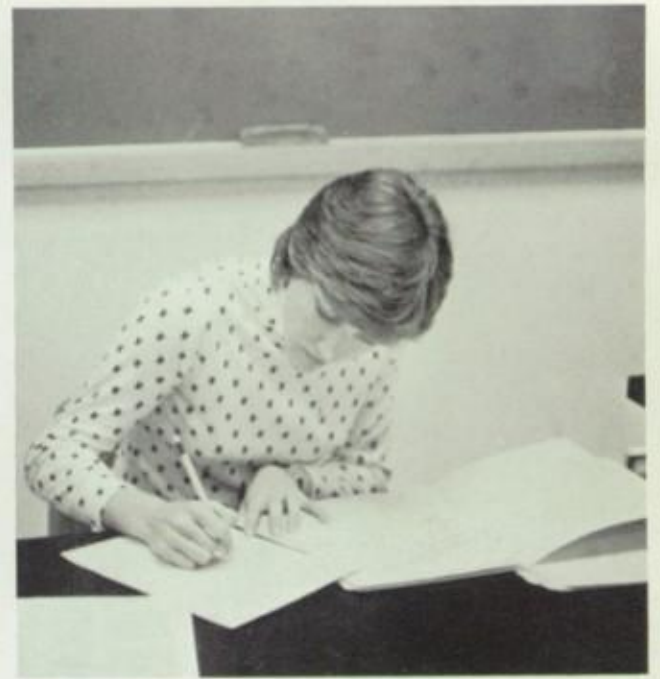

The science department went further into the study of science than could be reached through books. Students did chemical and mechanical experiments, did dissections, and heard guest speakers. Some even had the privilege of going on field trips.

Vive la FRANCE

LONG LIVE FRANCE! This was the feeling that many French students had after taking two years of French at Southwest. Miss Jeanne Grana taught both French I and II this year. Included in the year's activities were conjugating verbs, translating sentences and doing practice exercises. Miss Grana added a section on cooking, where students cook a French recipe and share it with the class, and much untold history. These events, when combined, made French class a first class act.

These French I students are beginning to understand the hard work and dedication that is required to master a foreign language.

Jill Murphy and Kelly Hughes are entranced by Miss Grana's review of the four principal verb parts.

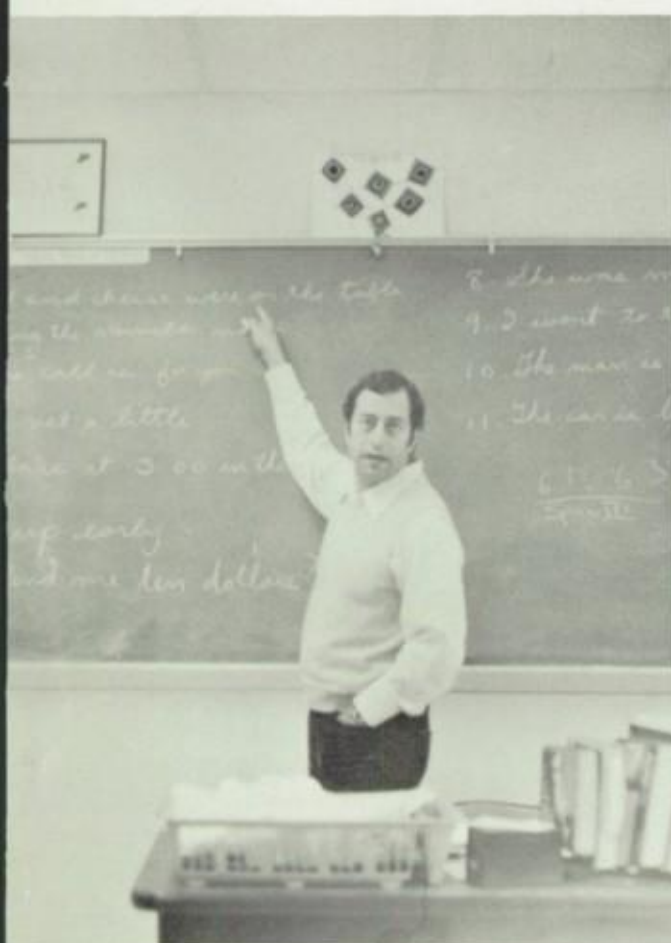

David Hart ponders his newly learned ability while Becky Fritz puts hers to use.

Spanish II is a challenging course for those pursuing their interest in the language and those fulfilling college requirements. Shown are John Wright, Leonard Craig, Mike Fairley, and Susan Thomas.

Viva el ESPAÑOL

Because over one third of the student population took Spanish, "Long live Spain!" was a feeling shared by many. Spanish I students felt it when they received their Tape Manuals. Spanish II students felt it when they got up before their class to give an oral report. Mrs. Judy Long, Spanish I teacher, and Mr. George Simon, Spanish II and III teacher, were responsible for creating this spirit. They taught verb conjugation and taped lecture comprehension. Mr. Simon was also the advisor of Spanish Club. This, when added to the other things, made Spanish a first class act.

With her Spanish labels, which help students identify everyday objects, in the background, Mrs. Long helps sophomore Trevor Duke with his homework.

Spanish II and III teacher Mr. Simon hopes that constant practice in sentence translations will pay off for students in college.

Brian Gordon admires the handiwork of the creative craft classes at the Christmas crafts sale.

Students displayed their own special talents in many ways this year as the drama, music, and art departments increased student appreciation of the arts.

The drama department, headed by Mrs. Emily Simmons, went to theater competition for the first time this year. They performed "Abra Cadaver," a murder mystery, and gained valuable experience. They also presented this play to the school and planned another one for the Spring.

The music department had a fresh start with two new teachers. Miss Ann Dalton taught chorus, and Mr. Jay Hanselman taught band. They both worked with their classes in order to better the quality of their students' performances. The classes gave a Christmas concert for the school before the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Wendy Kauffman was head of the art department. Students taking art had the opportunity to enter their artwork in the Scholastic Art Award competition and also in other competitions, including one sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club of High Point. They also designed the bulletin boards for our school. The creative crafts students also found that taking art could be profitable as well as fun when they held a crafts sale to earn extra Christmas money for themselves.

We've Got the Beat!

Our Cowboy band started this year to a new beat. A week or two before summer band practice was scheduled to begin, the band discovered that they had no director. Not until Aug. 12 did the band meet their new director, Mr. Jay Hanselman, and begin rehearsing for their half-time performances.

Besides their new director, the band faced many other changes. Their half-time show was more challenging, as it was different for every home game. This captured the audience's attention and pleased them. They were also under the direction of a new and talented drum major, Kim Armstrong. She proudly led the band through many hard practices and half-time shows. The flag team was also faced with many new challenges. For the first time, the flag team, with captains Sheree Morton and Beth Holliday, had to create all of their routines. They were successful in completing and performing their routines.

These changes, along with others, meant a lot of hard work for the band. They spent every day during sixth period practicing and had two to five days of after school rehearsals each week. These practices improved their marching and playing greatly. They also caused conflicts with jobs and other activities. All conflicts were finally resolved and the band proudly displayed the outcome of much hard work and proved to be a FIRST CLASS ACT.

BUSINESS . . .

Holds the Future!

George Blair and James Terrell work on the computers during Data Processing.

The business world was constantly changing and growing. It had grown into a highly involved and technical world with opportunities for most everyone.

Students realized this and chose to begin learning about business during high school. Courses were offered to give students a look into different fields. These fields included data processing, secretarial work, record keeping, accounting, and many more.

Just as the business world had grown, so had the business department at Southwest. The curriculum and number of students enrolled had increased. Mrs. Gerry Harris, Mrs. Pam Armstrong, Mrs. Pat Lore, Mrs. Carol Rinehardt, and Mr. Tom Weikel all joined together and contributed time and effort to make their department a FIRST CLASS ACT.

WORKING FOR THE WEEKEND

For some students, school was not just studying and learning in classrooms. It was also leaving school early, making money, and gaining valuable experience. These students had chosen to take COOP, DE, or ICT which were taught by Mrs. Carol Rinehardt, Mrs. Pam Armstrong, and Mr. Tom Weikel, respectively.

The students learned about going for job interviews, filling out tax forms, word processing, store layout and design, and many other things that will help after graduation.

Students received from two to three credits for having jobs and completing classroom work. They worked for businesses such as Winn Dixie, Putt Putt, Burlington Industries, radio stations, and many other interesting places. Some students chose full-time work, but others preferred part-time. Many students may choose to pursue careers with these companies after they graduate.

These courses gave students many advantages. It provided them with spending money, and, more importantly, it gave them the opportunity to decide what to do with it. Working and maintaining respectable grades proved to colleges, and will prove to future employers, that these students were responsible citizens.

TIP TOP SHAPE

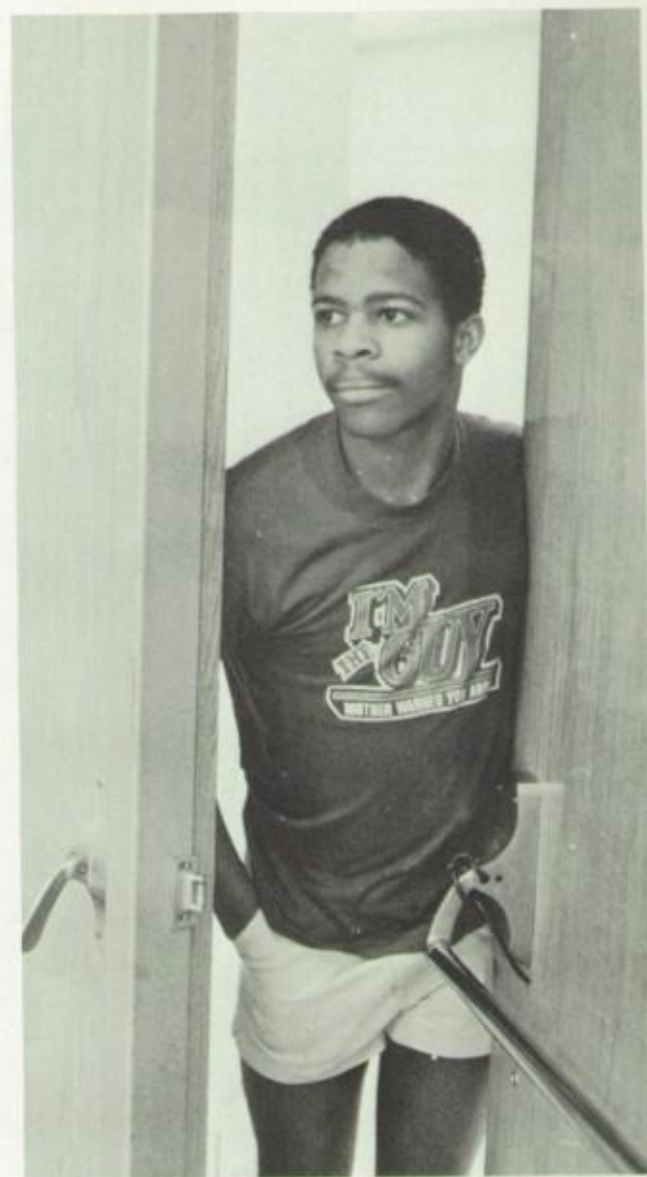

As in the past, physical education was an essential part of any freshman's schedule this year. However, sophomores were faced with a second year of gym beginning this year. In the past, students were only required to take one year of physical education; however, this year, a change in state laws forced students to take a second year of gym in order to graduate. For many, gym meant a break in the long school day. For others, the drudgery of "dressing out" and sweating for an hour was not the most exciting part of their day.

Athletes were able to exercise their enjoyment for physical activity by participating in Advanced Physical Education and weight-lifting classes. A new weight room was established in room 111. Previously the weight room had been in the storage rooms outside the gymnasium, but this year it was conveniently moved to an empty class room. Exceptional weight lifters, after completing various requirements, became members of the 200 and 250 Lb. Clubs.

As another year passed, young and old Cowboys participated in physical education, putting them in Tip-Top Shape.

In the privacy of her home, Carol Jones completes her assignment.

There was a definite misconception, by students, that the school day was over at the sound of the 3:15 bell. Soon they knew this was not a fact! Homework, studying for tests, standardized tests, and reports all formed a list of tasks that had to be done after the bell.

No student went through school without taking a multitude of standardized tests. The CAT, DAT, PSAT, and SAT were just a few of these tests that were taken. Sacrificing a Saturday morning, seniors and juniors planning to enter college took the SAT with hopes of a high score.

Students faced with writing term papers and reports turned to libraries for help. Both our school library and the public libraries contributed the information needed for thorough reports.

And, of course, we had homework and tests. They definitely became a part of each student's routine. Our teachers always seemed to find more "practice exercises" for us to do. Most of the time assignments were completed, but other times . . . Well, how could anyone resist a movie or a ball game!?!

GETTING THERE

Year after year there was one dilemma in a student's life that never subsided. It was the continuing problem of getting to and from school every day.

For freshmen, unless they were lucky enough to know someone who drove, there was the detested prospect of riding the bus. Their discouragement was eased, however, by the commencement of driver education classes, and their spirits were boosted by the fast approaching reality of possessing a driver's license.

Once one became a sophomore and got a driver's license, there was still the problem of getting a car to drive. Many students combatted the unavailability of cars and high gas prices by starting car pools. A parking sticker also had to be purchased for $1.00, and it took some practice to learn to park between the virtually invisible lines on the parking lot. Needless to say, all of these trials were worth the satisfaction of driving to school.

Having arrived at school, the staff in the attendance office was ready and waiting to assist students with excuses for absences or tardies and passes for early dismissals. They were also available throughout the day should a student need to go home.

Despite all the troubles and conflicts of getting to school each day, students found the hassle worth it and the transportation tribulations that accumulated over four years provided many amusing memories for everyone.

When You Wish Upon A STAR

If you wished upon a star this year at Southwest, you may have received eight issues of the Western Star. In the third year of production, the newspaper continued to be a First Class Act. Every issue was filled with the latest school events, and this year the newspaper carried the added attraction of a Putt-Putt coupon.

Senior Beth Holliday held the position of editor-in-chief as she supervised the star-studded staff in order to make the 1982-83 Western Star the best it could be. Mrs. Laura Boyles, advisor to the staff, spent much of her time outside of school hours to aid the staff in every way she was able. Several members of the staff wrote periodically for community newspapers informing the city of Southwest activities.

Students are often unaware of how much is involved in producing a single newspaper issue. There were deadlines to be met, articles to be written, and layouts to be designed. However, due to the hard work and diligence of the Western Star staff, dedication was rewarded with our wishes granted successfully.

HORIZONS of the First Class

This year the HORIZONS staff decided to create a unique yearbook dedicated to the seniors of the First Class. During the third week of June, several staff members attended yearbook camp at Longwood College in Farmville, Virginia. Although the food was inedible, the benefits were worth a part of their summer vacation. New members to the staff who attended were made startlingly aware of how very much is involved in producing a single yearbook. Important decisions of HORIZONS '83 began as early as the summer's beginning.

Along with the changes planned for the yearbook, the staff advisor was also changed. Ms. Cathy Parker replaced Mrs. Emily Simmons.

Yearbook class was held fourth period in room 110, a classroom devoted to the staff. Decorated with posters, plants, and bean bags, the staff members attempted to make the room appear "homey" in order to escape the confusion of deadlines, unfinished layouts, and unpolished copy.

After many grueling hours of hard work, the proud HORIZONS staff was presented with their masterpiece. With the staff's success, Cowboys were allowed to cherish their 1982-83 school year with fondest memories.

Organizations

During a sixth period meeting, Student Council discusses activities for Spirit Week.

TOP of the LINE

The Southwest Beta Club upheld the tradition of being an active, energetic organization once again this year. In the spring of 1982, an induction was held for Sophomores in order for the club to be able to begin immediately with the beginning of the 1982-83 school year. A second induction was held in November for Juniors and Seniors.

The Beta Club participated in many projects, including the Pumpkin Patch, for the benefit of the March of Dimes, held annually at Four Seasons Mall during Halloween. During a November PTO meeting, "Buy-a-Beta" was a success with members "hired" to do odd jobs for parents. Monthly Beta Club meetings were held at the Sirloin Ranch, member's homes, and there were also early morning meetings at school.

This year the Beta Club adopted a point system in order to encourage members to remain active. Points were awarded for attendance at meetings, participation in committees, and volunteer work.

Mrs. Judy Long and Mrs. Betsy Reagan contributed much of their time outside of school serving as advisors to the Beta Club. With their help and a tremendous effort from club members, the Beta Club continued to be the Top of the Line.

Treasurer Susan Thomas, Secretary Jenny Kletzin, Vice President Cheryl Miller, and President Dawn Hinshaw conduct the fall induction of new members.

The Spanish Club broke an all-time record this year. It had a total of fifty-nine members, almost double the membership of previous years. Mr. George Simon, the advisor, along with club president Todd Farlow, vice-president Trevor Duke, secretary Dana Gregg, and treasurer Laura Stanley worked hard planning activities to increase members' knowledge of the Spanish-speaking countries and their customs.

Monthly meetings were held to discuss upcoming events and fund-raising projects. One of the highlights of the year for club members was the Christmas party held at Chi-Chi's Mexican Restaurante. It proved to be a success as members tried many delicious new Mexican dishes.

Students that took French, or had previously taken it, had an opportunity to join the French Club and learn about the French culture and way of life through means other than a textbook. Club officers, along with Miss Jeanne Grana, club sponsor, worked together to plan and conduct regular meetings. Each consisted of French refreshments, a French game or discussion, and lots of fun.

The club had a busy Christmas holiday. They sponsored a needy family, giving them food and spreading a little Christmas cheer. They also made Christmas ornaments for the school Christmas tree and Tina Harrelson made a French banner. Their Christmas party was held in Miss Grana's room. In February, they had a full-course dinner prepared by club members.

Leading the Way

This year, Southwest had three active vocational organizations. They were: The Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA), The Future Homemakers of America (FHA), and The Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA).

Each of these clubs diligently pursued its goal of preparing its members to be active and useful parts of the business world.

They carried this out by attending workshops, conferences, and by entering competitive events to practice their proficiency in certain areas. The DECA advisor was Mrs. Pam Armstrong. FHA was sponsored by Mrs. Carol Heise. The FBLA adviser was Mrs. Carol Rinehardt. Because of the role these advisers played and the willingness of their students, these vocational clubs were responsible for leading the way of its students into the future.

into the Future

THE NEW CLUB ON CAMPUS

Southwest, continuing to grow, added a new club to the Cowboys' extra-curricular activity schedules this year. SECME, or the South Eastern Consortium for Minorities in Engineering, has been sponsoring field trips for math, science, and English classes in the past. However, this year Southwest was one of the few schools in our area to be honored with the request to begin an active SECME club. In the fall of the school year, several teachers and administrators began to encourage students to join SECME. With a tremendous response, the club got off to an active start. In September, SECME members held an assembly to give Cowboys a detailed look at SECME and its meaning and to encourage other students to join. Club members spent a weekend at the World's Fair where they were allowed the opportunity to see exhibits from all over the world. The club took a December field trip to the Natural Science Center in Greensboro. During the year, SECME members purchased sweatshirts with their individual names and the SECME logo.

SECME, the New Club on Campus, completed a successful school year and made SECME a familiar name to students. Along with the club's success, members gained valuable knowledge which broadened their scientific outlooks.

A JOB

DONE

Walking into Mrs. Crane's classroom during sixth period on Wednesdays, you may have overheard a discussion about Homecoming, the Valentine's Dance, painting bleachers, or planning the Student Directory. Almost every Wednesday, Student Council had a meeting in order to plan for an upcoming event. The first Student Council activity of the school year was helping the band FREEDOM JAM set up for their concert in the auditorium. On October 22, after hours of planning and organizing, Homecoming, one of the many activities Student Council sponsored, was a tremendous success as members watched the halftime program run smoothly. Spirit week was an extremely busy week for Student Council members as they sold lollipops, bandanas, and corsages. During teacher work days, several members sacrificed sleeping late to come and paint a pep section for the new bleachers. In February, as a fundraiser, Student Council members sold candy and chances to win a Valentine's heart filled with ten pounds of candy. The basketball Court was presented on February 18 after a week filled with various activities celebrating Valentine's. In the spring, completing an energetic year, Student Council members worked diligently to provide a Student Directory for the Cowboys.

A KICK

In The Right Direction

The 1982 Cowboy Soccer Team was a young, inexperienced team who played primarily to learn and made much improvement in the second half of the season.

Of the 18 members, only two were seniors, and a majority of the other players had never participated in the sport before this season. Also new to the 1982 season was Mr. Russell Slagle, who worked with Mr. John Tripp to coach the team.

Although the team finished the season 0-13-1, the record did not reflect the fact that the opponents were mostly larger teams, none of which were from the Central Carolina Conference. Outstanding players for the team were David Frankena, Most Valuable Player; Kirk Miller, Most Improved; Tim Hawks, and Won Tae Kim.

Winning key matches, the Cowboy wrestlers were virtually undefeated in their conference. Through peppy chants, inspiring cheers, and impressive pyramids, the Southwest cheerleaders led fans to abounding spirit. This spirit was not only expressed at our games but also at numerous pep rallies.

Many hours of hard work were dedicated by the cheerleaders not only at the games but also after school and at home. Making posters, baking for the players, and holding fundraising events were many of the activities in which the cheerleaders participated. By upholding school spirit, they led Southwest through two triumphant seasons.

Cowboys' Strong

Although plagued with many injuries, the 1982 Varsity football team had an impressive season. The talented offensive team entertained spectators with its ability as running backs Darold Hairston and Michael Fairley accumulated points at crucial moments.

The defensive team, led by linebacker Rodney Combs, did an incredible job in stopping offensive players. Their skill in making powerful, pin-pointed tackles resulted in the offensive's loss of yardage. With this capability of stopping their opponents, the defensive team helped to win their games.

Hours of practice, the coaching of Roy Boyles, and a strong determination to win gave the Cowboys the strength they had. It took the whole team working together to get the results they did. They gave all they had to maintain the Cowboy tradition.

All the players and their dedication to Southwest Guilford led them to their victories. These young men brought crowds to the stadium every Friday night as they played with unyielding determination to win for their school.

A Grand Entrance

THERE FOR THE ASKING

Mrs. Pam Hill and Mrs. Patricia Brown, our two librarians at Southwest, went that extra mile this year for every student that came into the library. Whether it was finding a book, looking for a magazine, providing an idea, or just keeping the library a quiet place to read, they were always there to help.

Our guidance counselors went by the same rule. Mary Dunlap and Coy Temple kept their office doors open to the students every day. They helped with scheduling, college plans, and career goals, and both were always there to lend an ear when one was needed.

We thank you, our librarians and counselors. With your help, our students were able to truly be a . . .

First Class Act.

Managing the media center doesn't seem a bother to Mrs. Hill.

Mrs. Brown's friendly smile greets students as they enter the library.

Working with computers to help provide information for the students is one of Mr. Temple's many jobs.

Ms. Dunlap with a smile shows her eagerness to help the students.

Mrs. Donna McFadden and Mrs. Jan Von Cannon take a break from their work to pose for the camera.

Mrs. Jones, manager of the cafeteria, watches as hungry students pass through the lunch line.

HELPING HANDS

Two of the most important services at Southwest were performed each day by two staffs that are most seldom recognized . . . our custodians and cafeteria workers.

The custodians kept our school sparkling clean and tidy. They were the first to arrive in the morning and the last to leave at night. They were always there to keep Southwest looking its best.

Our cafeteria workers were essential to us, also; just ask any student's stomach around twelve o'clock. These talented ladies were always able to quiet our growling stomachs with hot, home-made meals. So, to these two staffs we say, "Thanks."

Freshmen

They finally made it to the place they have heard so much about — high school. The freshmen, being frightened about going to a new school, were timid at first. With the help of the upperclassmen and teachers, finding the right classroom was not so hard after all. They soon adjusted to their new routine and became involved in school clubs and sports. The almost overwhelming amount of homework did not hinder the freshmen from being a tough competitor during homecoming week. Although they did not win the spirit award, the freshmen proved to themselves and to the rest of the school that they really belonged.

Sophomores

Showing their spirit and support, the sophomores could always be seen in the Cowboy stands yelling their lungs out. This year the sophomores really gave the seniors a battle in the spirit contest during homecoming week.

Being a sophomore really gave them something to shout about. Their long-awaited sixteenth birthdays finally rolled around. The screeching and squealing from the car, the shouts from Mr. Mills, the near fatal accidents and the "this could be you" films were all fond memories from the first weeks of Drivers Ed. for our sophomores.

Other not-so-fond memories were the many different tests, especially the PSAT that the sophomores experienced. In all of the events they encountered, whether serious or fun, they proved to have true Cowboy spirit. So watch out, next year's seniors, and this ain't no "jive" they're bigger and badder... they're the class of '85.

The Junior spirit was not dampened by the fact that they were the smallest class at Southwest as they never failed to participate in pep rallies or various spirit contests. Too, going out was made easier since almost everyone had his license.

However, being a Junior was not all play and no work as they prepared to face the dreaded day of taking the SAT. This did not discourage them, for they knew it was all a part of becoming Seniors.

The class of '84. Why say more?

What's the Most Embarrassing Moment You Had at Southwest?

Carol Jones — When I forgot to wear bloomers under my cheerleading skirt one day at school.

Kim Armstrong — Being blown away by Kenny Gordon at the air guitar contest during the Freedom Jam concert.

Lisa Pendergrass — Getting the nickname "Helen Keller" because of my black shoes.

Sandy Russell — Getting suspended for kissing Michael Loflin in the hall.

Cindy Smiley — Tripping the wrong person in the hall.

Jennifer Mosley — Being forced upon the auditorium stage and having the drummer of Freedom Jam sing a silly love song to me.

Michael Koprowski — Going into the girl's locker room.

Amy Funderburk — I was cheering at a basketball game and I kicked a referee in the stomach.

Jamie Hamilton — When Julie Sheek pulled down my shorts in gym.

Billy MacDonald — Not being able to lift 205 to get my 200 club shirt

Christen Hayworth — Being called "Wombat" in front of the homecoming crowd while I was cheering.

Jamie Cambareri — When I went to sleep at my desk and I fell on the floor.

Jody Lathrop — Acquiring the nickname "Chicken" and listening to Jay Boyles and Blair Minton tell chicken jokes during Biology.

With the graduation of this year's seniors, a drama four
in the unfolding came to an end . . .

As seniors, they faced new responsibilities and made important decisions as they chose colleges and careers, thus determining the courses of their lives. They maintained in themselves and encouraged in their fellow Cowboys the spirit, the courage, and the love that had dominated the first four years of Southwest. They left us with pride and it is with such that we salute our own, our special . . .

As juniors they witnessed a change in administration, welcoming not only a new principal but also a new superintendent. Not so welcome, though, was the new dress code that the administration imposed. In spite of the minor conflicts that arose as a result of the new ruling, that indomitable cowboy spirit once again emerged triumphant and the (well-dressed) Cowboys gave a whole new meaning to the term First Class Act.

As sophomores, they cheered our sports program straight to the top and watched with pride as the "Conference Champs" banners were hung in the gym. Thus, in one more area, they proved that they were indeed a First Class Act.

As freshmen, they expected to remain at their junior high schools; thus, they viewed their new school with uncertainty. The bare, unpainted walls, the auditorium without stage or steps, the doorless lockers, heating and cooling systems that didn't — all were part of the first year at Southwest, but the new Cowboys cheerfully endured those hardships to prove they really were a First Class Act.

*It's not easy bein' green,

When I think it could be nicer bein' red or yellow or

It's not easy bein' green, it seems you blend in with so many other ordinary things and people tend to pass you over
'cause you're not standing out like flashy sparkles or stars in the sky.
But green is the color of spring and green can be cool and friendly-like and green can be big like an ocean or important like a mountain or tall like a tree.
When green is all there is to be,
it could make you wonder why,
but wonder, why wonder?
I am green and it will do fine,
it's beautiful and I think it's what I want to be.*

We make the fabrics America lives in.

We're Cone Mills. And we've been making America's favorite fabrics since 1895.

We're a leading textile manufacturer with 11,000 people and 21 plants. And although technology and innovation have played a part in our success, it's our people we have mainly to thank. All of whom are interested and involved in not just their jobs, but also the communities in which they live.

And maybe that's why, today, you'll find that leading jeanswear and sportswear manufacturers count on us for denim, corduroy, and an entire array of other fabrics. We also produce fabrics for home furnishings, uniforms, career apparel, and greige goods. And provide fabric finishing services and an extensive line of polyurethane foam products.

... of the Beginning

Four years ago, the Charter Class of '83 arrived at Southwest as the very first group of wide-eyed freshmen to enter the school. They knew then that they were special, and they knew they would be happy as freshmen; but they also knew that coming along in a little while would be a year of greater happiness, a year in which a multitude of special things would happen. It is this year that has been recounted in the pages of this book.

As this year comes to an end, so comes the ending of four years. In a sense, it is really the end of the beginning. Southwest still has a long way to go, but it will never cross this same threshold again. The Class of '83 will always be particularly special because there will never be another class at Southwest that can claim it was the first.

The Class of '83 knew they were special when they arrived at Southwest four years ago, and they have carried with them this feeling of uniqueness throughout the years. They brought with them many dreams for themselves and for the school, and they worked hard to make the dreams become realities. Though not every dream came true, many of them did, and the Class of '83 played a big part in instilling these dreams in the classes to come after them.

This year's graduates will soon be heading off to other things and other places. They have completed one very important episode in their lives, and it is time to begin another. Each of them has different dreams and goals which will be fulfilled in various ways, but these students will always have one thing in common: They were each a part of an outstanding group that contributed much to the future of Southwest. No matter where they go, they will always have a special place in their hearts for the high school that has meant so much to them and whenever things aren't going quite right, they will be able to look back and remember that they were a part of something special.

Southwest will be the holder of many memories for many people, and the memories for the Class of '83 will surely be ones that they will treasure forever. It is hoped that they will not only treasure the memories of the past but also look forward to the future and the promise of even better memories to come.

The Charter Class of 1983 wishes the best to all of those they leave behind, and they also leave a request that students continue to build upon the dreams they had for Southwest. In doing this, they will make sure that even though the First Class is leaving, the students at Southwest will continue to prove that all of the Cowboys are truly a FIRST CLASS ACT.

We looked back and remembered the happy times
Feeling the rewards of hard work and dedication
At other times we felt all alone,
Isolated in the midst of a crowd,
Our existence was one of constant
New beginnings and continuous endings that Filled our lives and our memories.
It was our year, molded by the vast
And diverse characters of who we were
And had become.

The paper stock is 80 pound Gloss Enamel. The endsheets are Glacier, #120.

All type, with the exception of the headlines and endsheets, is Tiffany Medium. The body copy is 10 pt. Captions are 8 pt. and 6 pt. Captions for Senior portraits are 14 pt. Coronet Bold. The endsheet type is News Gothic.

It must be said that without the tremendous dedication of our staff photographers Cheryl Miller, Scott Welch, Phil Broughman, and Jeff Morgan, this yearbook would not have been possible. We would also like to thank Snow Studios of High Point, NC, for printing all of the color candids. Mr. C. F. Boswell was responsible for homecoming coverage and the title and closing pages. Underclassmen portraits were also taken by Mr. Boswell for Max Ward—Delmar Studios, Inc. of Burlington, NC. The Senior environmentals are by Vacaro Portraits of Lynchburg, Va.

This year the majority of the book was done in column style: Student Life and Academics/Organizations in 3-Column; Sports and Senior Statistics in 4-Column; Index in 5-Column.

The spot color on page 161 is 100% S-17, Forest. Page 200 is a Normal Black Halftone with 40% S-20 Autumn.

For the first time in our four-year history, a publications fee of $20.00 was charged to participating students. $18.00 per fee was allotted to the yearbook staff. HORIZONS '83 had a press run of 400 copies and was distributed in May, 1983.

The staff appreciates all the assistance given by many talented individuals but special thanks must go to Mrs. Carol Rinehardt for making it possible to store the index data on microcomputer TRS80 floppy diskettes—Profile; Mrs. Emily Simmons, our former yearbook advisor, for much advice and for allowing the Photographic Staff to use her spare room as a darkroom; the Greensboro Daily News and the High Point Enterprise for the use of several pictures; the instructors at the Max Ward—Delmar Yearbook Workshop at Longwood College for their assistance in our cover and theme development, as well as the seven staff members who attended the workshop; Debbie Meuser, our company representative, for the friendly voice that made us feel everything was going to be all right; Mrs. Deana Freeman whose advice and encouragement lead us through the year. Most of all we thank Ms. Cathy Parker, the single most important contributor to our yearbook.
